House Passes Bill Making Appropriation of $350,000 for One.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Among the bills passed by the House to-day under suspension of the rules was one appropriating $350,000 for a naval station at Pearl Harbor. In the course of the debate Champ Clark, in favoring the bill, declared that the station should have been established long ago, because, he said, unless the United States had a naval station at Pearl Harbor country would locate one there.

BRIDGE AND POKER WORSE THAN BETTING ON RACES

Senator Martin Expresses This View and Washington Women Assure Him That He Is Right.

Times-Dispatch Bureau,
Munsey Building,
Washington, D. C., April 6.

Gambling in society in Washington may be an evil of much greater proportions than the public generally thinks. Senator Martin, who is a member of the subcommittee of the District of Columbia considering the antibookmaking bill passed by the House, remarked a day or two ago that while not an advocate of race-track gambling it was his belief that bridge whist and poker caused more unhappiness and policies are strong; its forces are united, while the Republicans are divided, and its appeal to justice will find a quicker response than heretofon, because the public conscience is being awakened by the investigations that have shown corruption in politics and greed in the favor-seeking corporations that have dominated the government."

"I realize that it has become so that it is often embarrassing for a woman to discharge her social duties at all without playing cards for money."

The lady asked the Senator whether something could not be done to put a stop to the evil. Senator Martin replied that he did not think anything could be done so far as Congress was concerned, but that he believed public sentiment could be aroused by giving publicity to the extent of the evil, which would result in its being largely eradicated.

Many stories of large losses inducing serious financial embarrassment and frequently causing domestic unhappiness. Senator Martin also had something to say regarding poker-playing in the national capital, the pastime indulged in by many of his colleagues among the lawmakers. Probably there is not as much plung-ing at cards as there was in Wash money changes hands over the card table as there did in Washington in the olden days.

They Also Are Smoking.

Senator Martin is far from being a man who believes in legislation to regulate his neighbor's morals and habits, but he is very pronounced in his criticism of two practices—gambling and smoking by women. It is well known that the latter habit has grown in prevalence in Washington in the last two or three years. Formerly some of the women wishing to be regarded as ultra "smart" whiffed a cigarette in secret. Nobody but her chum knew that she ever pald court at the shrine of My Lady Nicotine. Now, however, girls who smoke, while rarely or never indulging the habit in public, do not attempt to conceal from their immediate circle that they derive enjoyment from a Turkish or Egyptian: "they say" none of them smoke the American product.

was generally productive of greater evil than gambling on the horses at the Benning track.

The publication of this statement, and Senator Martin has heard from a great many women in Washington on the subject. They have been calling him up by telephone to discuss the matter with him, his correspondents being unknown to him in every case. In every case, also, they declare that the Virginia Senator did not overstate the case; in fact, they all agree that he might have made it far stronger.

The Case Understated.

One of these women in discussing the subject with the Senator by telephone, while refusing to give her name, safir "Gambling at bridge whist is much more serious than you have any idea of. It has become so bad that besides losing more money than they can afford, a great many women are neglecting the inhomes, their husbands and their children in order to devote themselves to the game.

6 Woman Fell Into Well.

With no one in the house aware that she had gone out. Mrs. George Ely, of No. 129
East Thirteenth Street, while under a severe attack of nervousness, from which she had long been a sufferer, wandered from her leme some time Sunday night or early yesterday morning and fell into a well in the yard of William H. Jennings, where the body was found at 7 o'clock.

Mr. Jennings stated that when he went to draw a bucket of water he felt an unusual weight attached, but not until it was sudderly released did he realize what the extra burden was—a woman's hody. Mr. Jennings hastily summoned neighbors, and with the assistance of Sergeant J. C. Saunders and Mr. Churlle Harris, who went into the well, the body was drawn to the surface. She had been dead for several hours.

Mrs. Ely had long been a sufferer from a severe nervous disease, but on the evening before her death she appeared very much better, and according to her son, Dudley Ely, took some part in the general conversation, as thing which she had not done for some time before. The family became very much alarmed yesterday morning when it was discovered that Mrs. Ely was not in her room, and a search was started. No one thought of looking linto the well, and before any trace of the missing woman could be found Mr. Jennings notified the family of the circumstances already related.

Six or seven small gashes were discovered belout the throat of Mrs. Ely, but it is thought they were the result of the fail, she having grobably, come in centact with the brick, with which the well is walled up, or with the bucket in the fall. None of her family entertains the notion of sui-cide, and deny that any instrument with which she could have inflicted the wounded was found.
